The foreign exchange market (forex, FX, or currency market) is a global decentralized market for the trading of currencies. This includes all aspects of buying, selling and exchanging currencies at current or determined prices. In terms of volume of trading, it is by far the largest market in the world. A trader focuses on his trading and risk management strategies. If he is naïve, he makes unprotected trades and often does not use stop-loss orders. He fears he will not be able to take advantage of the currency pair's earning potential if he stops his trades abruptly. To be successful, the trader must be able to set aside money that he can afford to lose. He is content with the projected benefits his capital can generate. As his trading account grows, he uses strategies like diversification techniques to preserve his capital.
