Customer Reviews

Hi, This book can potentially be life changing. I've created many of my own products and sold millions online. Yet, I took away some very valuable ideas from this book. Here are the top 7 things I learned (or was reminded of in a positive way):

1. Instead of blaming the economy for down sales, blame your activity level for being too low. It's easy to get in the mindset that the problem is the market or the economy. He makes a great case that the problem is the activity of you and/or the employees in your company.
2. Become omnipresent. He has a chapter about omnipresence. This is a GREAT mindset for marketing.... become omnipresent in your market.
3. Seek to dominate your market instead of being competitive. Being competitive is the wrong target. This is a great point and changes your mindset totally.
4. We consistently underestimate the activity level required to get a result. The problem isn't laziness or anything else. It's simply that we underestimate the activity level required to launch a new product, make sales or create a successful marketing funnel.
5. 10x thinking + 10x action. This isn't about thinking only (like Think and Grow Rich) or action only. Action without the right thought behind it spins your wheels.
6. Set your goal to be 10x greater than you think you need. Expand your thinking. I like this idea. It changes the activities you plan to reach your goal.
7. Plan to take 10x the actions you think you need. Now, there are a LOT of ideas and nuances I didn't list above.

10X Rule Book Review

Grant Cardone writes a game changing book, this book is great for entrepreneurs and sales teams. The book talks about taking massive actions, aligning your goals with other goals. It is a highly motivational book and I would recommend anyone reading this to read it like a text book. Reading once through is not good enough. I see a possible book sequel with proper in-depth tools and tips.

The 10X Rule book talks about:

1. The 10X Rule – You must set targets that are 10 X what you think it will take to accomplish.
- Massive thoughts are followed by taking massive actions, operating at 10X levels.

Grant Cardone says that people generally do not take enough action, let alone massive actions. People are generally setting targets that are too low and not exciting, spending time competing and not dominating. 10X rule says do 10 actions and set targets 10 times higher than you first imagine.

2. Why the 10X Rule Is Vital – Never reduce a target. Instead, increase actions.
- Any target attacked with the right actions in the right amounts with persistence is attainable. Grant talks about the more actions you take, the better chances of you getting "lucky".3. What is Success? Success is important. If you quit caring, then you quit winning; quit winning long enough, and you will just plain quit.4. Success is your duty. You must constantly demand success as your duty, obligation, and responsibility.5. There is no shortage of success. You must rid yourself of the concept of success can be restricted in any way. Operating under this notion will hurt your ability to create success for yourself.
